HONG THAI TRAVEL

#02-121 People's Park Complex www.hongthai.com.sg enquiries@hongthai.com.sg

The South Korean capital is a shopper's haven with great bargains around every corner, says Joanne Poh

MENTION Seoul and thoughts turn to soap opera heartthrobs and ancient palaces. Given these stereotypes, one might be forgiven for perceiving Seoul as the domain of drama serial-loving ladies. Look past the smiling advertisements of celebrity-endorsed products, however, and you might uncover a quirky city with sophisticated tastes. As with all societies heavily influenced by Confucianism, the concept of "face" is all-important to the Korean people. However, the denizens of Seoul take this deep-seated concern with appearances to a whole new level. Everything - from shop signage and tourist brochures to the meticulously applied make-up adorning women's faces - is primed, designed and styled to be as pleasing as possible. This makes bargain shopping in Seoul a pleasure rather than a desperate scramble to unearth hidden gems from a pile of junk. Passion for fashion At shopping centres such as Migliore at Myeongdong and Hello apM at Dongdaemum, slink your way through never-ending warrens of stalls retailing Korean-made clothing. A far cry from the low quality, ill-fitting wholesale apparel one might be forgiven for expecting, most of the clothing on offer is of excellent quality and, very importantly, is fashion-forward and edgy. Each shop owner is a stylist in his or her own right. Basic T-shirts and cardigans are matched with tapered chinos, large-framed tortoiseshell spectacles and canvas loafers; printed dresses are refreshingly paired with combat boots, and everything is layered to within an inch of its life. Bargaining is necessary at all markets and most small shops. While most shopkeepers speak little English at best, your most winsome smile and the soothing refrain of, "Cheaper?" unfailingly coax the salesgirl into brandishing her Hello Kitty calculator. After grappling with mental sums for a few seconds, she deftly punches out a discounted price. You feign shock appropriately until a happy compromise is reached. When the afterglow of your bargains has faded and you spot your latest purchase on no less than three passers-by, you may begin to desire something a little more unique.

Head to Doota! at Dongdaemun for mid-priced fashion that echoes the trends of its cheaper cousins with more interesting details and better fabrics.

If you are opposed to spending your holiday sequestered in a shopping mall, you have only to look anywhere on the streets to find vintage-inspired dresses, nautical striped shirts and Dr Martens-style boots.

Open-air stalls and markets, such as those in the vicinity of Ewha Women's University and lining the thoroughfares of Myeong-dong, offer clothing that can rival what is found in the shops.

Haven for beauties

Nowhere else in the world is the value of a pretty face, male or female, better appreciated.

Alight at the Apgujeong subway station and you will be greeted by the image of a row of imperfect noses, accompanied optimistically by their post-surgery counterparts and a smiling face of their plastic surgeon (right).

Apgujeong is the playground of the rich and famous. The men in these parts are fairer and thinner than their compatriots in Myeongdong, Quaint interior of a café near Apgujeong station.

A Vespa scooter on the streets of Apgujeong.

who seem unpolished in comparison.

Cosmetic surgery clinics, spas and tanning salons lurk around every corner.

Venture a little way into the interior of the district and you find several streets of self-consciously fashionable cafés, restaurants and boutiques.

Certainly, everything here is a tad more expensive than it would be anywhere else in Seoul.

But you have not really come here for that organic tea or that slice of green tea tiramisu but for a day in a fantasy world which, try as you might, you cannot help but admire.

Pots of pansies peek charmingly out of the shop windows at which they have been strategically placed.

The yogurt with granola (below) and blackcurrant tea you order seem progressive even as they hint at simpler, more wholesome times gone by.

As you emerge from the café, the waiter, in all his geek-chic glory, bids you farewell with a slight bow.

The Seoul subway system is one of the world's most efficient.

GETTING THERE

Singapore Airlines flies direct to Incheon International Airport in Seoul two to four times daily in about 7hr 25min. Economy class tickets are priced at $1,329 onwards. Korean Air and Asiana Airlines also operate direct flights to Seoul.

INSIDER'S TIPS

Do not be deceived by the term "market". Goods on sale are head and shoulders above what is on offer at Singapore's pasar malam stalls, the occasional Louis Vuitton knock-off notwithstanding.
